

Naco, Arizona, in 1916, with the border customs station in the center of the street. Photo courtesy Sergeant Paul Ballinger. @1916.00.00.030

The 10th Cavalry on the march near San Antonio, Chihuahua, Mexico, on the Punitive Expedition, 1916. Capt. A. E. Philips leads the column on a white horse. Philips was in command of the machine gun troop of the 10th. The regiment was commanded by Col. W.C. Brown. @1916.00.00.067

Capt. Henry A. Meyer, Capt. A. E. Phillips and Lt. D.R. Scott, Punitive Expedition, Chihuahua, Mexico, 1916. Note "sneakers" on Lt. Scott. National Archives Series, 94-UM-200072. @1916.00.00.079

Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing, and his aide Lt. James L. Collins, in Colonia Dublan, Chihuahua, Mexico, 1916. National Archives photo. @1916.00.00.086

Men of the Machine Gun Troop, 10th U.S. Cavalry, dismantle a position in a tree during the 1916 Punitive Expedition. National Archives photo. @1916.00.00.111

Mushroomed tents, Camp Harry J. Jones, Douglas, Arizona. @1916.00.00.170

Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing in front of his tent. His aide, Lieutenant J. Lawton Collins is at the left. @1916.05.24.001

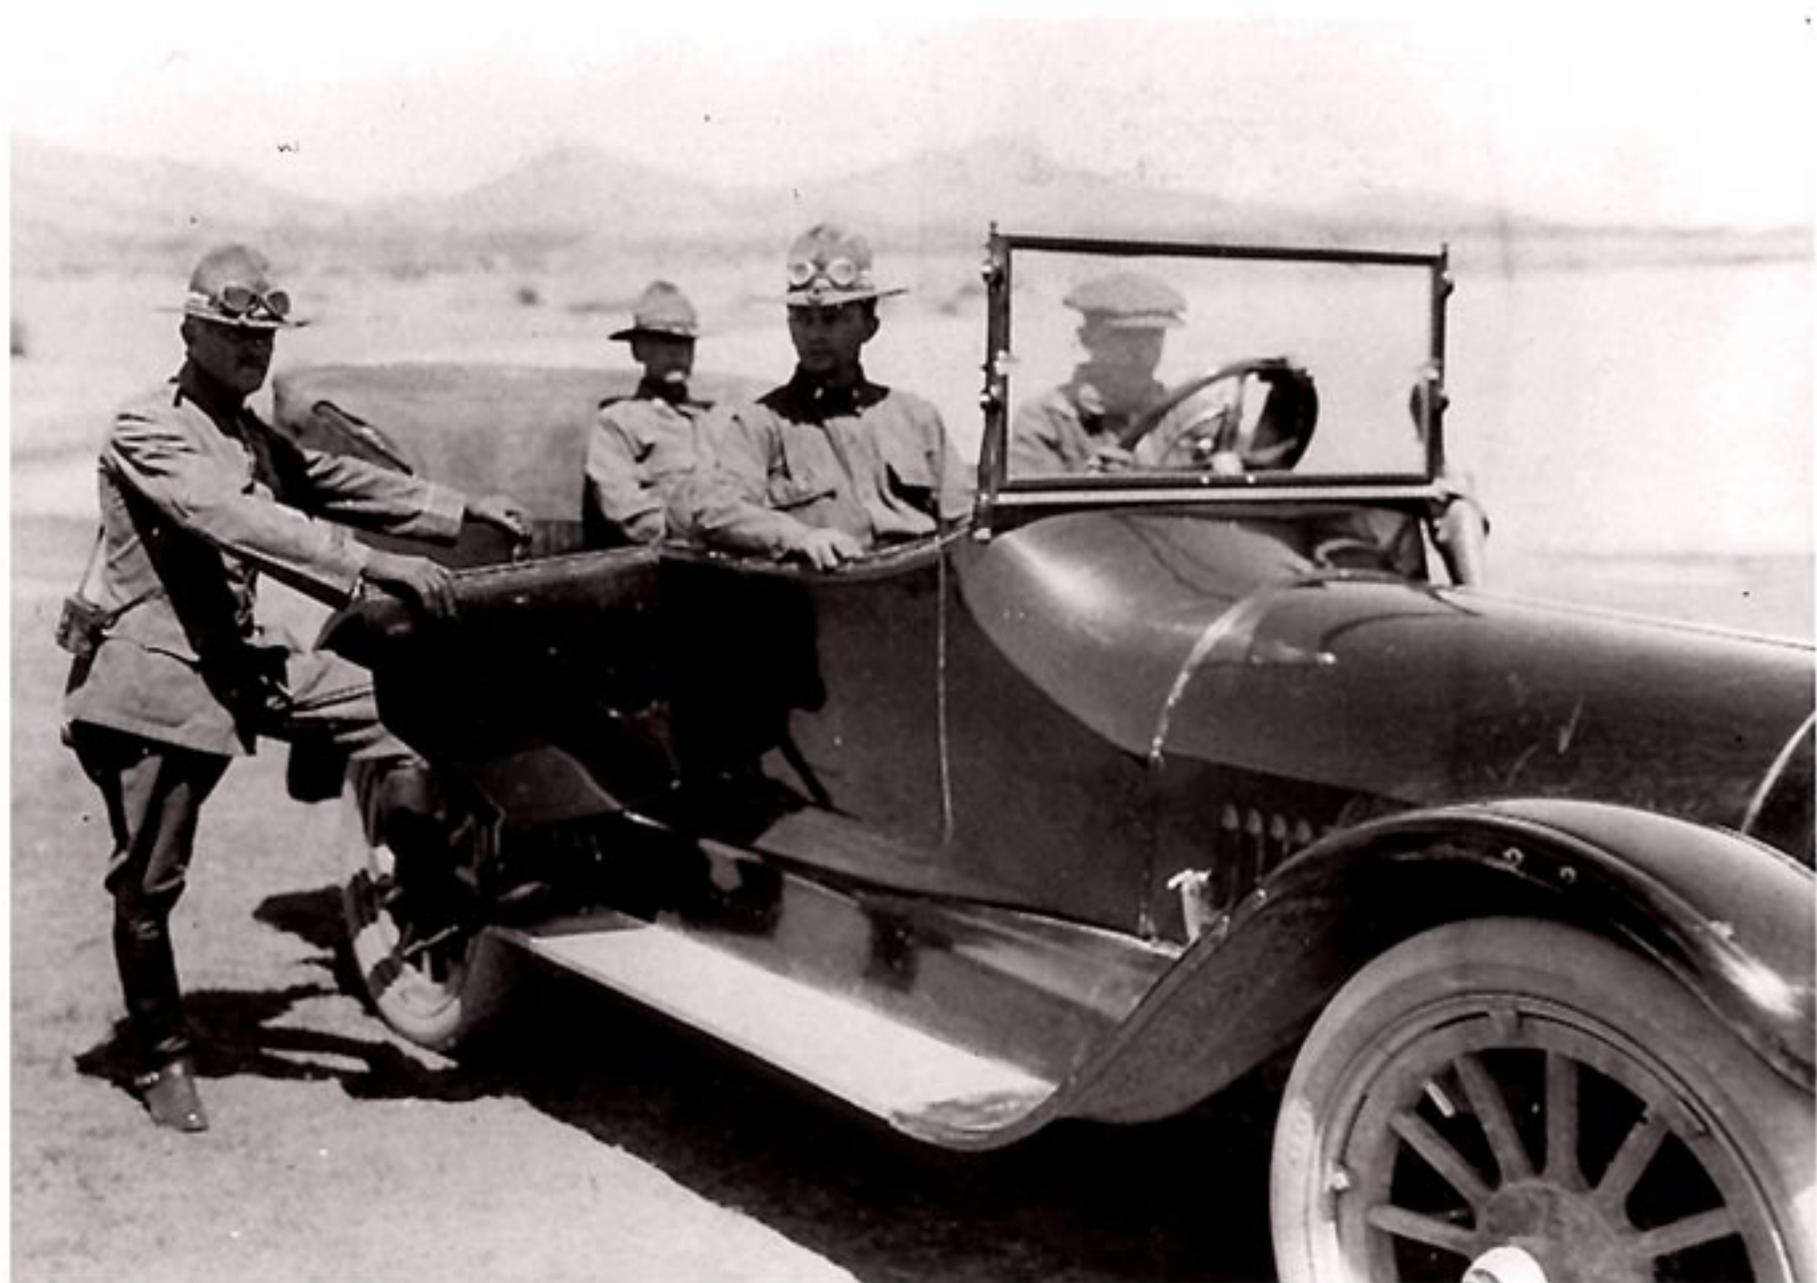

Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing in a pensive mood, Colonia Dublan, Chihuahua, Mexico, July 21, 1916. National Archives Series 94-UM-203910. @1916.07.21.001

"Battlefield Scene in Mexico." Photo by W.H. Horne, El Paso, Tex. @1916.15.00.036

"Militiamen Breaking Outlaws." Photo by W. H. Home Co., El Paso, Tex.
#1916.15.00.038

Pershing and his staff car in Mexico, 1916. @1916.00.00.113

A camp of the 1st California Infantry at Fort Huachuca in 1916. This photo was available as a post card. @1916.00.00.134

A field kitchen of the 1st Arizona Infantry at Naco, Arizona, in 1916. @1916.00.00.167

10th Cavalry on the march in Mexico. ©1916.15.00.045

A posed bayonet drill by members of a National Guard unit stationed along the Mexican border during the 1916 Punitive Expedition. @1916.15.00.064

Capt. Fritchard and the 10th Cavalry regimental colors in front of his tent during the 1916 Punitive Expedition. @1916.15.00.071

From left to right: General Obregon, Pancho Villa, Brig. Gen. John J. Pershing, Lieut. J. Lawton Collins. ©1916.16.00.001

Signal Corps soldiers operate a heliograph along the Mexican border around 1916.

Photo courtesy Walter J. Markel, son of Capt. Julius W. Markel, a construction quartermaster at Huachuca from late 1918-1920. @1918.00.00.112

From the Markel Collection. @1918.00.00.121

Brayton Hall (bldg. no. 21115) in 1918. From the Markel Collection. @1918.00.00.130

Mexican laborers' camp. From the Markel Collection. @1918.00.00.131

10th Cavalry cooks at Fort Huachuca in 1918. Photo courtesy Markel. @1918.00.00.136

From the Markel Collection. @1918.00.00.138

From the Markel Collection. @1918.00.00.140

From the Markel Collection. @1918.00.00.140

Shanties along Huachuca Creek for laundresses and camp followers. From the Markel Collection. @1918.00.00.162

The family of Col. Frederick T. Arnold with their automobile, shipped in by wagon. Photo courtesy Mrs. Frederick T. Arnold. @1918.02.28.001

*A Signal Corps Radio Tractor in the field, around 1918. U.S. Army photo.
@1918.13.00.002*

"Chow Factory," Troop E, 10th Cav., Tuscoso Canyon, Ariz." Photo courtesy F.H.L.
Ryder Collection. @1918.16.00.007

A postcard addressed to Capt. F. H. L. Ryder, Fort Huachuca [crossed out], Nogales, Arizona. Photo courtesy F.H.L. Ryder Collection. @1918.16.00.009

An interior shot of the officers' club around 1921. The building is now the Fort Huachuca museum. Photo courtesy the Scott Collection. @1920.15.00.005

Rodney Hall, bldg. no. 41402, built as post headquarters in 1917. It today fulfills its original purpose. @1920.15.00.025

The officers' club in 1920. U.S. Army photo. @1920.15.00.031

During the 1920s at Fort Huachuca, troopers from the 10th Cavalry considered themselves to be the elite arm of the service, even though the firepower experienced in World War I would quickly make the horse Cavalry obsolete. The mounted soldier shown here is Pvt. Tom Prowl. @1920.15.00.048

The massed standards and colors of the 10th Cavalry and 25th Infantry at Fort Huachuca in September 1926. Left to right: Col. Louis Charles Sherer, commanding 10th Cavalry; U.S. Senator Ralph W. Cameron of Arizona; Col. Andrew Jackson Dougherty, commanding 25th Infantry. #1926.09.00.001

The railroad station at Fort Huachuca in about 1928. @1928.00.00.012

10th Cavalry Machine Gun Troop at stables, ca. 1928. Photo courtesy of Col. Paul Matte, formerly with MG Troop from 1928-32. @1928.00.00.013

Men of Company M, 25th Infantry, drilling with bayonet in November 1928. Standing in the center is 1st Sgt. Thomas Werzontwerch. @1928.11.00.001